KY. FARMERS TO USE MORE FERTILIZER

Lexington, Ky., July 21—Reports being received at the College of Agriculture from county agricultural agents in various parts of the state indicate that Kentucky farmers this year will use fertilizers, especially limestone and acid phosphate, more extensively than they have in the past few years. This is seen by soil specialists at the college as a marked step toward soil improvement in view of the fact that limestone and acid phosphate, when used on the state's soil experiment fields, repeatedly have demonstrated their ability to increase crop yields on practically all types of soil found in Kentucky.

Grayson county farmers have made arrangements to use at least 1,600 tons of limestone this fall, more than 90 per cent of which will be used in connection with acid phosphate. County Agent R. W. Secare says. Applications will be made at the rate of two tons of limestone and 100 pounds of phosphate an acre. It is expected that at least 500 acres will be limed in this county.

In Henderson county farmers have made arrangements to pool their orders for stone in order to increase its use in the county. According to County Agent D. W. Martin, while 400 tons of stone already have been crushed in Lincoln county and plans made for the crusher to work in four other communities during the summer and fall, C. B. Elston, county agent, says.

Contracts have been made for the crushing of 700 tons of limestone in Larnie county, according to County Agent J. W. Jones, who adds that interest in the use of limestone and its value in increasing crop yields is growing in that county. Farmers in one community of Oldham county have made arrangements for a arload of stone which will be used on wheat and clover demonstrations to be conducted on 5 different farms. County Agent Jordan B. Nance, says.

A number of Union county farmers are obtaining good results by using limestone. County Agent L. C. Brewer says. One of them, S. W. Blus, who lives near Morganfield, is planning to use two carloads each year on his farm for the next five years.

Bumble Bee Holds Up High Sheriff

The old saying "a man in a hornet's nest don't know what he is doing," came near being proven Tuesday morning while Sheriff Joe Keefe was driving along the Harrodsburg pike near the John B. Jewell farm in an automobile. A bumble bee flew up his coat sleeve and landed four severe stings on his arm in rapid succession. The hornet-like blows caused him to temporarily forget he was driving an automobile and when he stopped the machine it was just in the act of going over a small embankment. Joe wants the next Legislature to pass a law making it a death penalty for bumble bees to be found loitering for attacking or holding up travelers on the public highways. He said this particular bee is now making the best of it in "Bumble Bee Sheol, and I'm carrying four big whelps on my arm."—Nicholasville News.
